A LESSON.

[From Anfaceger.]

Ahi the foture, what a promise!
But the present's slipping from us,
Use it, ere it's spell

Pray not tet the former blind you,
Botter yot, nel look behind you
At the post that's dead.

At the past that's dead.
Lova of right, and not the wooling
Of raise or favor in welt-doing,
For abound he our care;
Yet often, we man's days are anded,
Right and obavity extanded
Find rounital here.

What are taisate without action?
What is isbor with distraction
Of pursuit to-day?
Not the meteor bright and transient,
Bat the planet strong and unsient
disides us with its ray.

Know you why the nacient Romen, Whom he fought his sturdy fosman, Found his task so light? Dritted with arms the were his mea With iras arms he found a laisare, When he came to fight.

Bighest thinking, highest yearning, Keep our soals forever spurning. Aught that's low of derk; Air that's high is atways purest, Aim that's high is atways surest. Of a distant mark.

Whither wa would tend.

If there's naught for all our doing,
Then out idding or persuing
Still were not the same;
Highest efforts unavailing,
No diagrace can come af failing,
With a tofty aim.

Let us, then, be up and ready,
To att treth and duty steady,
Ever pressing on;
If we act the present deefal,
We can ne'er, ne'er be ruefat
Of a day, when gone.

What's true wealth and what's tr But the doing of one's duty, In this short career; For the taients to an given Blossom fait and rich in Heaven, If we work them hare.
